Dogma

Depicted as a deity that is very peaceful and alleviates suffering. Pelor teaches that the energy of life orginates from the sun. This light brings strength to the weak, and health to the injured, while destroying darkness and evil. He encourages his followers to fight against the forces of darkness, but teaches, just like staring at the sun for too long, relentlessly pursuing evil can blind one to the true essences of life: kindness, mercy, and compasion.

Clergy and Temples

The clerics of pelor wear white and yellow robes. They are usually kindly people who hurridely tend to the sick and protect the weak. They use their powers to heal, nourish, and otherwise aid the needy. Many clerics leave their pastrol duties to become protectors, fending off the forces of evil and darkness and protecting the innocent, although they almost always have the intention of returning to aid the weak.

Temples to Pelor are designed with many tall windows, to let in as much light as possible. The door way usually faces the rising sun. Many of them serve as hospitals for the sick.
